Remittances in Crisis: How to Keep them Flowing

Convened by Switzerland and the United Kingdom on the occasion of the International Day of Family Remittances

Tuesday, 16 June 2020

8:00 - 9:00 (ET) / 14:00 - 15:00 (CET)

On the occasion of the International Day of Family Remittances, Switzerland and the United Kingdom in partnership with World Bank/KNOMAD, UNCDF, IOM, UNDP, the International Association of Money Transfer Networks, and the International Chamber of Commerce would like to invite you to a webinar to build on the recently launched

Call to Action «Remittances in Crisis: How to Keep them Flowing»

The unprecedented disruption of remittance flows as a consequence of the current global crisis is severely affecting migrants, diaspora communities, and the families, communities and economies that rely on receiving remittances in low- and middle-income countries. It is projected that remittance flows to these countries will sharply decline by 20% – around US$110bn – in 2020. Remittances provide a vital lifeline for hundreds of millions of people round the world, and such a significant drop will inevitably impact on their ability to cover basic necessities, such as food, housing, healthcare and education. Ensuring that remittances can continue to be sent and received without obstacles will mitigate this impact, and will prevent millions of people from falling into poverty. Facilitating the continued flow of remittances is also vital for the resilience and recovery of local economies and communities in many low- and middle-income countries heavily affected by the health and economic crisis caused by the spread of COVID-19.

The Call to Action aims at keeping remittances flowing throughout the crisis and mitigating the impact on the people and economies most affected, by calling on policymakers, regulators and remittance service providers to take measures that facilitate the continued flow of remittances from migrants and diaspora members to their families and communities in low- and middle-income countries.

The webinar will serve as a platform to discuss how countries that have joined the Call to Action are affected by the disruption of remittances and how the implementation of the Call to Action's recommendations can keep remittances flowing during the crisis and beyond.
